

The South Wales Centre for Historical and Interdisciplinary Research Lecture Series presents:

‘Renaissance Humanism, Popular Devotion and Manuscript Culture in Wales and the Marches’

by Dr Kate Olson, Bangor University

Wednesday 2 March, 5.00-6.30 pm, Caerleon Campus Boardroom

One of the rising stars of early modern Welsh history, Kate Olson is working on the period of the Reformation and its impact on Welsh society. In this paper she explores some of the key texts which throw light on the development of religious ideas in a formative period for the Welsh sense of identity.

Lectures are open to the public as well as to staff and students.
The lecture will be followed by a chance for informal discussion.
Tea and coffee will be available, and it will help with numbers if you book your place – email kelly.malarz@newport.ac.uk

For updates, last-minute changes and information about other lectures in the series visit our web site at

<http://www.newport.ac.uk/swchir>

For more information contact Ray Howell, Director of SWCHIR - ray.howell@newport.ac.uk